Your past life interests and/or concerns:

Most recent past life
WWII
Intimacy concerns

The first significant past life:

I see you in a past life as a Choreographer/ Director in stage performance in the 1890s. It feels like ballet and/ or opera, but you may have been involved in more than just those forms. You loved the stage, the acting, and the crowd. If you were talking to someone during the show and the crowd began to clap, you would “hush” the person so you could listen to the crowd and take in the appreciation. Everything in your life was art. How you interacted with people, how you decorated your home, even how and what you ate was a precise, conscious artistic expression of yourself. You took in and appreciated every single moment, and your attention was in the moment. (The feeling of this is amazing, to be able to live your life that way, not mentally scattered by the contrast of our busy modern multi-tasking.) You were very expressive, verbally and through body language, though calculated in how you expressed yourself the way you wanted to be seen and the way you wanted to “be.” In your mind in that lifetime, by “being” you believed you would “become.” As far as your relationships went, you had a confusing personal/ romantic life. As a man, you dated a lot. At one time you were involved with two women at the same time, long-term, and at least one of them was married. You went on to marry in your 50s; she had children and grandchildren, so you became a part of their life, and you didn’t feel unfulfilled. You passed away in 1926 or 1927, I’m hearing of heart failure, at the age of about 62. I’m getting two locations, Southern California and Brisbane, Australia.

Important Points:

Karmic Relationships: The women you were involved with, specifically the two you had long-term open relationships with, are in your soul group and you’ve reincarnated with before. There seems to be some sort of recurring love triangle, or recurring close romantic relationships between the three souls. (Usually different roles in your lifetimes, so for example, in one life two people could be first or second spouse to the third person).

Lessons/ Purpose: This was a lifetime to learn to enjoy the moment, and to heal, after another lifetime that was rather traumatic.

The next significant past life:

I'm seeing you as an eight to ten year old girl in Poland, standing in the kitchen of your apartment asking your mother frantically, "Mom, what do we do, what do we do?" The war felt very far away to you prior to that moment, and you had no idea that it could come to your doorstep. You'd never felt like the war was a concern, and you had no inkling that your parents were worried. Now you were hearing panicked people in the streets that troops were coming in (I can't sense which troops invaded, but it was 1941). Your family packed some small brown briefcase-shaped bags and headed out of the apartment, I can see your dad in such a rush that he gets his suitcase jammed into the railing on the stairway leading out of the apartment building. Before you can get out the door to the sidewalk, you hear gunshots not very far away. So instead of leaving, you and your parents head back upstairs to wait it out. Fast-forward: you are outside your apartment building screaming, very upset, and alone in the street. There is visible damage to the buildings and no one in sight. You felt deserted, and you were left alone. You were very sad, confused and lonely. (I am not being shown the traumatic scene). Fast-forward: You are in your 20s and living in an apartment on your own. It feels like you were raised in some sort of non-biological family situation like an orphanage, where you left without any close ties. You are working for a newspaper, I see an old-style typewriter and it feels like a secretarial job. Colleagues make jokes about you not dating or getting married. There were a few flirtations, but none leading to marriage.

Important Points:

Lessons/ Purpose: Karmic. This lifetime was an extension of another previous lifetime (previous to these above). You were making karmic amends in these two noted lifetimes above. Being alone and unmarried in the second lifetime was a result of the war's trauma on you. While you were pre-destined/ pre-contracted to meet someone and form a marital bond in that life, you chose not to allow people get close emotionally and as a result, that relationship did not become serious.

This life is but a brief tenure, one of many perspectives a spirit must experience in the quest for eternity.
